

ONUS OF WRECK ON LOST LINER

Skipper of Nantucket Says
Monroe's Captain Violated
Maritime Rules.

DEATH SHIP IS LOCATED

Divers and Wrecking Tugs to Raise
Hull and Remove Bodies of Victims—Capt. Johnson, Defended.

Baltimore, Feb. 1.—The steamer Nantucket, which sank the Old Dominion liner Monroe, Friday morning off Hog Island, reached port early today. Shortly afterward a conference was held between Capt. Berry and officials of the Merchants and Miners' Line. Later Capt. Berry gave out a statement placing the blame for the collision upon the shoulders of Capt. Johnson, of the Monroe. He claims that Capt. Johnson was guilty of violation of the maritime rules by attempting to pass the Nantucket starboard to starboard.

Capt. Berry also denied the statements of Thomas Harrington, one of the rescued passengers of the Monroe, who declared that members of the crew of the Nantucket wanted to throw the body of his wife overboard.

"Such a statement must have been due to the disturbed condition of Mr. Harrington's mind in the hour of his distress," said Capt. Berry.

The officials of the Merchants and Miners' Company congratulated Capt. Berry on his good work in connection with the disaster, and have decided to present him with a letter of commendation for the conduct of himself and his officers and crew in the rescue work.

Wreck Is Located.

Norfolk, Va., Feb. 1.—The wreck of the Monroe was located late today twenty-four miles south of Winter Quarter lightship. A choppy sea defeated immediate efforts to recover the bodies of the thirty-nine persons as yet unaccounted for, and the wrecking tug Merritt, immediately put into Norfolk, where divers and paraphernalia were ordered, so that the rescue work might begin tomorrow morning.

The Monroe's mast was discovered first and a buoy was attached to mark the spot. Just how the wreck is lying is a matter of conjecture. It is believed, however, that she is resting on an even keel and that the work of the divers will be comparatively easy.

Maritime experts expect that all the missing will be found entombed in the wreck. They had no time to leave their staterooms, before they were carried down with the liner.

George H. Uhler, inspector general of the steamboat inspection service, has received the report of the men who investigated the causes of the wreck. He has refused to make public testimony, but it is known that he carried the charge that the captain of the Nantucket is at least subject to serious criticism for permitting his ship to proceed at ordinary speed through a dense fog.

Seven of the survivors were sent to their homes tonight, by the officials of the Old Dominion Steamship Company, and others probably will leave tomorrow night.

E. E. Palen, assistant general manager of the Old Dominion line, insists that Capt. Johnson, of the Monroe, should be commended rather than censured for his conduct at the time of the wreck. He said:

"Capt. Johnson is in New York, but the report that he sought safety in the first lifeboat to leave the Monroe is untrue. He was in the second of the two boats that got off safely, and only when there were no other passengers on the deck that could be reached. He put three other passengers in that boat before he got in himself and if he had not acted as he did, the loss of life would have been greater."

AMBASSADOR DUMBA IS ATTACKED BY DOG

Bitten in Hand While Separating Fighting Animals. He Receives Treatment at Hospital.

CANINE WILL BE EXAMINED

In attempting to separate his dog from another which had attacked it, the Austrian-Hungarian Ambassador, Constantin Theodor Dumba, was bitten in the right hand yesterday afternoon.

The Ambassador was walking up Connecticut avenue, with his black spaniel dog on a leash. At Dupont Circle, which on every pleasant afternoon is crowded with pedestrians, a fox terrier, belonging to James Ricks, butler for Edson Bradley, who has a residence at the circle, attacked the Ambassador's dog.

Ambassador Dumba endeavored to separate the animals, and as he did so the fox terrier caught his hand, biting through the middle finger. The Ambassador immediately went to the United States Naval Hospital, where the wound on his finger was treated by Dr. A. W. Dumba, U. S. N.

Ricks took his dog to a police station where it was held for examination by officials of the Bureau of Animal Industry, who will make tests today to see if the animal is infected with rabies. Ricks will have to appear in Police Court to answer for allowing his dog to run at large unmuzzled.

LABOR LEADERS RAISE ISSUE WITH CONGRESS

Demand Unions and Farmers' Bodies
Be Exempted from Prosecution
Under Sherman Law.

PRESIDENT OPPOSED, IT IS SAID

Organized labor has started a campaign that extends to every district in the United States and is designed to force the Democratic Congress to incorporate in one of the pending anti-trust bills a provision exempting labor organizations and farmers' associations from prosecution under the Sherman anti-trust law.

An issue thus has been raised which administration leaders acknowledge may cause a good deal of trouble in a political way. The understanding is that President Wilson is opposed to the adoption of a provision exempting labor from the application of the anti-trust laws.

While Democratic leaders are disinclined to discuss the subject, one of them has made the statement that in a recent conference the President expressed disapproval of the exemption sought by labor. This was at a time when the President's anti-trust program was being whipped into shape by leaders in Congress designated for the purpose.

In the last Congress the Democratic House incorporated an amendment in the sundry civil bill exempting labor unions and farmers' associations from prosecution under the anti-trust laws. An amendment proposed by the Judiciary Committee, which framed the measure, was rejected.

An effort will be made to draw from the President a declaration of his attitude toward the cause of equal suffrage. The visitors will urge particularly that the President make an effort to induce the House Rules Committee, which has so far refused to take action, to pass a resolution creating a committee to consider all measures dealing with equal suffrage.

SUFFRAGISTS TO MARCH ON WHITE HOUSE TODAY

Deputation of Working Women Will Ask President to Declare Views on "Cause."

TEN STATES ARE REPRESENTED

A demonstration in favor of woman suffrage will be staged in and around the White House today for the benefit of President Wilson. Working women from ten States interested in the cause of equal suffrage will march to the White House to urge the President to recommend the creation of a House committee to consider the question.

A special train, carrying delegates from New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Delaware arrived here yesterday afternoon. Last night the working women suffragists were entertained in various homes throughout Washington. Miss Alice Paul, head of the Congressional Union, reached the city yesterday, and immediately got in touch with Miss Lucy Burns and other suffragists who engineered the movement to bring the working women to Washington.

Today's demonstration is planned as an answer to charges that have been made by the "antis" that most of the working women of the country are opposed to equal suffrage.

At 10:30 o'clock the suffragists will meet in mass meeting, and promptly at noon the march to the White House will begin. The President will receive the visitors at 2:45. The cause of the suffragists will be presented to President Wilson in brief speeches, to be delivered by Misses Melinda Scott, Margaret Hinchee, Rose Window, and Rose Schneiderman.

An effort will be made to draw from the President a declaration of his attitude toward the cause of equal suffrage. The visitors will urge particularly that the President make an effort to induce the House Rules Committee, which has so far refused to take action, to pass a resolution creating a committee to consider all measures dealing with equal suffrage.

PENNY'S INCOME REDUCED.

Shows Decrease of Operating Surplus Over 1913.

Philadelphia, Feb. 1.—In spite of increased operating expenses on some lines and a decrease in total gross revenue, the Pennsylvania Railroad system showed a total reduction in operating income for the year 1913 of $10,727. This is less than 14 per cent decrease.

The earnings of the Pennsylvania Railroad are of great interest, as this road pays dividends to 8,336 stockholders. In 1912, after paying a 5 per cent dividend on $48,577,500 of stock, the road had a surplus of $10,300,000. The capital stock was increased last year to nearly $60,000,000. By this step the dividend requirement was increased $2,725,000. The income from investments in 1913 was about the same as in 1912.

For 1913 the surplus over dividend requirements will probably be about $4,000,000, and the earnings on the increased capitalization were something over 7 per cent.

WOMEN CAPTURE LAST FORTRESS

Two Will Enter Service of Interstate Commerce
Body Today.

BARRED FOR MANY YEARS

As Result, Smoking Will Be Prohibited
in Room in Which They Will Work.

The business woman today will storm and carry the last stronghold of the Federal government where there has been sex discrimination among employees.

For the first time since its organization, more than a score of years ago, two women will take the oath of office as employees of the Interstate Commerce Commission. This branch of the governmental service has been the only one where they were barred.

Until the present time the Interstate Commerce Commission has been the only bureau of the government in the offices of which men were permitted to smoke. To make way for the entrance of women, employees a rule has been formulated, whereby smoking will be forbidden in the room assigned the new comers.

The non smokers have been segregated and transferred to that room. Those who use the weed have been located elsewhere. Thus, the women will not be annoyed by tobacco fumes.

Names Are Not Given.

The names of the women breaking down the last barricade against their sex in the government service have not been disclosed. They will perform the duties of stenographers and typists.

The explanation given for the long barring of women from the Interstate Commerce Commission is that they have not been available for the duties heretofore imposed. Necessity has required the use of men because they must go on traveling assignments, conduct investigations, and perform other labor where a woman would be out of place.

Noted by Italian Observatories.

If the region in which the quake occurred was inhabited it is believed that great loss of life must have resulted.

PLOTTERS FEEL WEIGHT OF HUERTA'S IRON HAND

More Arrests Made and Several Executions Without Trials Are Reported.

Mexico City, Feb. 1.—Several additional arrests were made today in connection with alleged plot against Huerta. Among those arrested were Levin Castillo and Carlos Carranza. Papers found in their possession showed, it is said, that they were agents of Carranza.

The police also have seized a large quantity of arms and ammunition which is claimed to have been secreted by the conspirators for use in the uprising which was set for the anniversary of the overthrow of Madero.

Several of those arrested are reported to have been executed, but the more prominent men under arrest are believed to be safe.

The government announces that when the rebels took the town of Concepcion del Oro, a few days ago, Lieut. Martinez and fifty federalists refused to surrender to the six hundred rebels and all were shot down.

El Paso, Feb. 1.—It is learned here that Gen. Blanquet, the Mexican minister of war, has let it be known that all officers or soldiers who escape from Fort Bliss, where they are held as prisoners of war, and return to Mexico, will be rendered to their places in the army.
